Democratic Candidate Joe Reagan and Voters Reject DCCC Interference in CO-5 Primary

Colorado Springs, CO — Today, the Joe Reagan campaign denounces the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee (DCCC)'s endorsement of competitor Jessica Killin ahead of Colorado's 5th Congressional District Democratic primary on June 30th, 2026.

Reagan, a local veteran, father, and nonprofit executive and community leader is running a grassroots effort against a competitor who arrived here last June after a 20 year career in Washington and immediately announced their candidacy for the CO-5 congressional race with a war chest funded almost exclusively with out-of-state, big donor funds.

"The same institutional Democrats who lost us Congress and the Presidency in 2024 are trying their tired strategy again," Reagan says. "They are backing a Washington insider who hasn't lived here in 20 years and bought a vacation home in the Broadmoor to claim residency.

"This is a losing strategy and the voters in CO-5 are fed up with it. We have an immensely capable team built on local support and fighting for what matters to us. After two years as a candidate on the ground in CO-5, knocking tens of thousands of doors, we've built the kind of grassroots energy that no amount of Washington money can manufacture."

Joe's campaign reflects his leadership in the community and his career of service. His focus is bringing authentic representation of his constituents to Washington. Joe is more than just another politician, he is an invested stakeholder. This is an advantage he holds over Killin in the general election against the incumbent Republican opponent Jeff Crank.

"Jessica Killin has outside money and a DCCC endorsement. What she doesn't have is this district — and voters know the difference," says Reagan. "Jeff Crank is beatable, and I'm the candidate with no baggage, no IOUs to D.C. insiders, and a decade of showing up to prove it."
